3 Reading: Movie Night in the Majlis On my own · وحدي

ليلة الأفلام في المجلس

Read the Reading Lab text again. Answer in full sentences.

Last Thursday, Sara's family turned the majlis into a cinema. Her father hung a white sheet on the wall, her brother connected the projector, and her mother made three bowls of popcorn. Noor came too, because Sara invited her.

They chose a Saudi film about a boy and his falcon in the desert. While the opening credits were rolling, Sara's little sister was already asking questions. "Is the falcon real? Where is the boy's mother?" Everyone was laughing and shushing her at the same time.

The film was better than they expected. In the middle, there was a plot twist: the falcon was not lost; someone stole it. The whole room gasped. Sara's grandmother was knitting, but she stopped. Her father was checking his phone, but he put it down.

Then, during the best scene, Sara fell asleep. She was leaning on a cushion when the boy found his falcon, and she missed the ending. The next morning, her sister explained everything, twice, with sound effects. "I recommend it," Sara said at school. "Especially the part I didn't see."

1 How did the family prepare the majlis for the movie?

2 What was the plot twist?

3 Why did the grandmother stop knitting and the father put down his phone?

4 What were you doing while your family was watching something last week?
